As Wholesale Distributors, Simpkin, Marshall & Co. keep in stock millions of volumes, covering many thousands of titles, by which means a stock is kept of practically every book for which there is the slightest demand. Thus if a book-buyer wishes to obtain a book, of which he has merely a hazy notion as to title, author, or publisher, he need have little hesitation in approaching his local book-seller, putting his wants before him. Simpkin, Marshall, & Co. make a feature of being able, by means of a wonderful system of cataloguing—extending back as far as 1830—to trace such a book, and, if not able to supply, to say definitely such book is no longer in existence. The firm is linked up with great agencies and book establishments all over the world (See advertisement p. xii).

“The Writer”

Is a Monthly Magazine which is devoted solely to the interests of the author, journalist, free lance, and anybody who desires to write for the Press or Magazines. Its aim is to show the literary aspirant how to write, what to write, and the all-important point of where to sell that which he has written. It gives, month by month, a list of markets where the writer has a good chance of selling his wares; it also has many articles written by experts, all designed to show where to dispose of his MSS.

“THE WRITER” is an entirely independent journal and is connected with no school, agent, correspondence college or any other institution whatever. It may be obtained from bookstalls and newsagents, or direct from—

Author of

"The Dictating Machine as a Business Asset," Etc.

That 100,000 business men dictate to Dictaphones is an acknowledged fact, but at the time of writing very few authors have installed these machines to help them with their labours.

One cannot help wondering why the cost of Dictaphones is low while the service rendered to authors is great. Dictaphones are, in a word, authors' secretaries par excellence.

Many authors have attempted to write every word they wish to set on paper by hand. Then again they have tried dictating to shorthand writers or directly to clerks operating typewriters. None of these ways of working is really satisfactory, but dictating to a Dictaphone is undoubtedly ideal.

The spoken word is more forceful than the written one, and thus authors who use Dictaphones are soon marked out for the directness of their style and the outspoken character of their work. Young authors especially who cannot stand the long hours of drudgery when beginning, should use Dictaphones, and their work will then have a freshness and piquancy of strong appeal.

I used to write 5,000 words daily, week after week, and month after month, by hand. I could never keep pace with the demand for my work, but now by using a Dictaphone regularly I can keep well ahead, and be as fresh after a 10,000 word day as I was when I started.

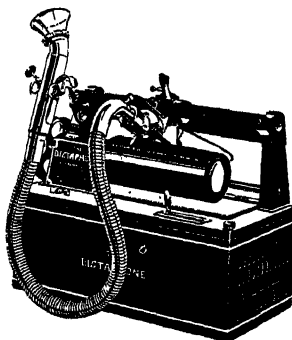

A Dictaphone used constantly for twelve months will enable almost any author to double his output, and as doubling one's output usually means more than doubling one's income, the advantage of having such a machine should be obvious.

Work can be done comfortably and quickly, whether one's staff are on duty or not. By lifting the speaking tube off its rest and pressing the dictation lever and dictation button down, the Dictaphone is ready and willing for anything.

all their letters, notes and instructions, and find it as essential as the telephone. The Dictaphone eases the whole work of the office. Until you have heard the new model No. 10, the latest triumph in Dictaphone machines, you do not know how clear and easy Dictaphone dictation is.

THE 'AUTHORS' GREATEST AID.

In this age of typewriters it is very difficult to realise that the wonderful piece of mechanism which is to-day a necessity in every commercial office and business concern of any pretensions has grown to its present-day position in a period of little over 50 years.

The Remington Typewriter Company were the introducers in 1873 of the writing machine, and to quote one of their favourite slogans "there was no such word as typewriter until Remington introduced the first machine in 1873." It is very interesting to hear from the latest reports that the present-day business of the pioneer company is beating all previous records. One of their latest products is the Remington Portable, which in a very short time has established itself in the front rank of this type of machine; it is a product of a factory which has over 50 years' typewriter manufacturing experience behind it, and while it is most compact it combines all the sturdiness and wearing qualities of the bigger machines sold in the Remington name; it is also fitted with the same standard keyboard and has that delightful touch for which the bigger machines are so famous.

The sales of the Remington Portable are, we are informed, going up by leaps and bounds, and it is undoubtedly a splendid investment for the literary man, as its operation is simplicity itself and it can save him many a pound in the typing of MSS.
